

Camping Life

May 2010

2010 Editors' Choice

Featuring: The Manta 25

Circulation: 68,207

Readership: 204,621

7 Osprey Manta 25 Daypack

For 2010, Osprey got together with Nalgene and designed a daypack and hydration reservoir that works together as a system — it's called the Hydraulics line. The idea was to provide great daypack design with all the goodies like lots of loops and pockets and compression straps you need for a day on the trail or bike, with outstanding fit and comfort, and find a way to properly compress the reservoir for good water delivery while reducing sloshing. Our favorite from the line is the Manta 25. It carries a whopping 1500 cubic inches (25 liters) of cargo and features Osprey's LightWire peripheral frame and ventilating mesh back panel that keeps the pack off your back and free of sweat, but still keeps it under control while your moving with properly fitting shoulder straps and hip belts. The included 3-liter reservoir features a wide mouth for easy filling, and is made from EVA material that's taste and odor free, BPA and PVC free, and anti-microbial. $140: Osprey Packs: 866/284-7830; ospreypacks.com.

campinglife.com

