

Urban Climber

October 2010

In the Climbing World...

Being a Mutant is a Good Thing

Featuring: Limited Edition: Mutant 38

Circulation: 25,000

Readership: 82,500

URBAN CLIMBER
OCTOBER 2010

COIN: 43

IN THE CLIMBING WORLD...

BEING A MUTANT IS A GOOD THING.

OSPREY OF LIMITED ED

TRUST AND CRAFTSMANSHIP are steady fast qualities in Osprey's products. In the business for 36 years, the company came out with its All Mighty Guarantee in 2009, meaning if there's any damage or defect in the product, Osprey will fix it or replace it for free—even if it was purchased 20 years ago. Now that is standing behind your product. Founder and head designer Mike Pfothenauer even moved his family to Vietnam for four years when production relocated there from Colorado to meet growing product demand—a serious commitment to quality.

NOW OSPREY IS offering a limited edition, red Mutant 38 backpack. Limited edition means you can't have it, so feel free to tell your friends. Or even better, knowing you have at least your pack is a good thing for your adventures or mutant gear. Features include: a foldable Blivi Pad is repositionable as a groundsheet, and comes with Osprey's All Mighty Guarantee.

OSPREY WANTS to give you a Mutant 38 backpack (a $149 value), so visit urbanclimbermag.com for this issue's sweepstakes.

TRUST AND CRAFTSMANSHIP are steady fast qualities in Osprey's products. In the business for 36 years, the company came out with its All Mighty Guarantee in 2009, meaning if there's any damage or defect in the product, Osprey will fix it or replace it for free—even if it was purchased 20 years ago. Now that is standing behind your product. Founder and head designer Mike Pfothenauer even moved his family to Vietnam for four years when production relocated there from Colorado to meet growing product demand—a serious commitment to quality.